

“Color Fields” at MassArt’s Bakalar and Paine Galleries

This new exhibit pays tribute to MassArt alum and professor Albert Munsell, inventor of the Munsell Color System. The works by 13 internationally known artists use a variety of methods to make vivid art pieces, from Sonia Falcone’s “Campo de Color,” created with various pigments and spices, to John Knuth’s “flyspecks,” which he made by feeding watercolor paints to hundreds of thousands of common house flies and then letting them land on his canvas.

Free, through March 7, Bakalar and Paine Galleries at MassArt, 621 Huntington Ave., Boston, more info.

Four New Exhibits at Brandeis’s Rose Art Museum

The Rose Art Museum in Waltham kicks off four exhibitions this month for its spring season—if you can call it spring, of course. The four exhibit include new acquisitions at the museum, a newly curated gallery of “understudied” pieces, and “Painting Blind,” an exhibit of works that blur touch and vision.

Seven New Exhibits at Wellesley’s Davis Museum

Four new exhibits? Try seven new shows at the Davis ranging from Rembrandts to Warhols. Check out the colorful “Reconstructing Seurat” by Michael Craig-Martin, work by Parviz Tanavoli—the father of modern Iranian sculpture—and the return of two exhibits including “Hanging with Old Masters: The Reinstallation of the Davis Museum.”

Film Screenings: Big Hero 6 and Roman Holiday at MIT

If you missed Big Hero 6 in theaters and are now regretting it, then take advantage of the MIT Lecture Series Committee, which will host multiple free screenings of Big Hero 6 and Roman Holiday this month sponsored by the de Florez Fund for Humor.

Free, various dates and times, MIT Building 26-100, Cambridge, mit.edu.
